
3-15-1996

Moon Marks

Sue Nevill

Follow this and additional works at: <https://dc.swosu.edu/mcircle>

Part of the Children's and Young Adult Literature Commons

Recommended Citation

Nevill, Sue (1996) "Moon Marks," The Mythic Circle: Vol. 1996 : Iss. 19 , Article 9.
Available at: <https://dc.swosu.edu/mcircle/vol1996/iss19/9>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Mythopoeic Society at SWOSU Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Mythic Circle by an authorized editor of SWOSU Digital Commons. An ADA compliant document is available upon request. For more information, please contact phillip.fitzsimmons@swosu.edu.

To join the Mythopoeic Society go to:
<http://www.mythsoc.org/join.htm>

Mythcon 51: A VIRTUAL “HALFLING” MYTHCON

July 31 - August 1, 2021 (Saturday and Sunday)

<http://www.mythsoc.org/mythcon/mythcon-51.htm>

Mythcon 52: The Mythic, the Fantastic, and the Alien

Albuquerque, New Mexico; July 29 - August 1, 2022

<http://www.mythsoc.org/mythcon/mythcon-52.htm>

Additional Keywords

Poetry; Moon Marks; Sue Nevill

MOON MARKS

by Sue Nevill

turn in the night to face the window

you have not dreamt the light

this is the mark the moon full and burning makes on your sheets

mad moon

searing ice into the brains of those who sleep bareheaded

turn

women have died for skin this pale and men have killed for it strings of grave light pulling them down bowstrings of light singing

I am the history of witches the first excuse for dance

*open the window
it is large enough to climb through kiss my ivory fingernail and swear you have forgotten gravity* drape yourself in my shocked silence deaf to everything except the quiet collisions of owls of hearts

mad moon

freezing the slow maples

open the window

Editorial

Hello again, and welcome to The Mythic Circle 19. Another fine story issue, we believe; a brew of fantasy and folktale with a dash of surrealism. Our illustrators have done their usual splendid job (we are particularly fond of the comic crocodile motoring an unusual craft through The Thunderslammers), and Sarah Beach has given us an evocative glimpse of a mermaid for our cover. We are grateful to all our contributors, and we hope you enjoy what they have given us.

We hope, also, that you take the time to give us your Letters of Comment. As you will see, we didn't have many for this issue! As you read the magazine, jot down your comments and send them in. Our authors do appreciate them.

We are writing this in October, but as these things go, the magazine probably won't be in the mail before spring. So our best wishes to each of you for a happy Easter.

Tina Cooper and C.I.S. Lowentrout

Letters Of Comment

Dear Editors—

The Mythic Circle 17 has some really interesting material. I can't say I was entranced by most of the fiction, but Richard Goldstein's Islamic adventure tale "The Ruby" was well thought out. No sword-and-sorcery in the true sense here, but the flavor of occult mystery. There is in my mind a reminiscence of George Meredith's 19th Century story of The Shaving of Shagpat (remember the Ballantine 1969 Adult Fantasy Classics series of Lin Carter). And even a touch of William Beckford's 1787 hellish novel of Vathek (same series as above)! The feeling of 'labyrinth' is here; watch your step, one escape from a difficult situation can lead to disaster. Kismet is in the air, as befits the story's structure and Arabic atmosphere.

"Saucepan Tales by Cellar-Light" by MacGregor Card seems to follow next in complex structure. The Buddha-of-the-Bellman is intriguing enough, but requires a very slow leisurely reading, even re-reading, to get its "plot." Don't rush the tale and let your mind wander over its details. You